

Aloe 'Fire Opal'

Size: Small, Colour: Red to white, Flower time: After mid-winter, Stem: No,
Frost tolerance: Protect from frost

Beautiful red-to-creamy white racemes adorn this lovely little grey-green, stemless plant in winter.

The sharply pointed leaves are covered in prominent but soft, white, warty spines. Some stem shoots may appear from under the main plant. Because of the stemless habit of the plant it may be better to remove them because of space considerations. Fire Opal is best cultivated in a container, but more mature plants may be moved to the front of the rockery. Well worth cultivating.
